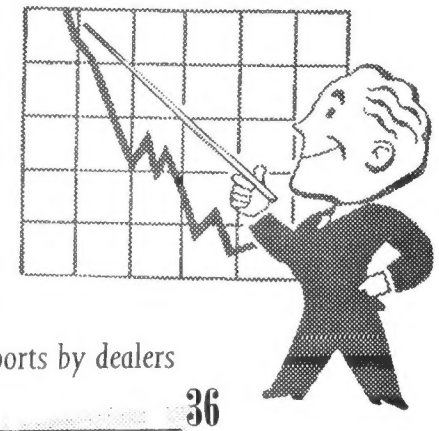
COMICS SOURCE TICKER TAPE

THE INDEX OF SOLD



You ask for it—you get it! Comics Source now provides the only alphabetical index of actual sold comics compiled from the sold listings in the Comics Source marketplace and from sales reports by dealers nationwide. ____ 36

Welcome to the Tenth Issue of Comics Source! Having always been committed to providing a safe and honest Marketplace for buyers and sellers, we are proud to present something new in this issue, the Complaint Department, where we will keep you informed of buyers and sellers who have not dealt satisfactorily with our readers (page 57). Complaints that we receive in writing will be discussed and advertisers will be blacklisted until such problems are resolved. The new Complaint Department is just another way we are looking out for you!

Before you sell a valuable comic, be sure and consult our new TickerTape, the Index of Sold (page 36), which has received rave reviews and should prove helpful to you when comparing comics in varying grades of condition. If you'd like to contribute actual sales information, we will give you credit for free marketplace listings. Turn to page 39 for more details.

Have you tried buying or selling a comic in our Marketplace? This month we offer almost 4,000 comics representing over $300,000! Many current advertisers are boasting of success resulting from this inexpensive form of advertising. Check out the Marketplace to find out more.

"An Introduction to the Golden Age of Comic Books, Part II" by Ron Goulart (page 15, continued from our last issue) brings us up-to-date on the exciting super hero business in the forties, including the early adventures of the Spectre, the Justice Society of America, Flash and many others, and lots of interesting Golden Age comic facts for all of us, especially those of us who were still in diapers in those days or perhaps yet a speck in our mother's eye!

Crime fighting and family life don't mix very well for super heroes, according to Craig Shutt who brings us a humorous account of the Fantastic Four in "The Importance of Being Franklin" (page 20) from our Silver Age Clubhouse. Travel around the Negative Zone with Reed and Sue and their unnamed babe (and not without numerous life-threatening incidents, of course).

Remember the days when comics were exciting, read for fantasy, and were purchased for entertainment, not for value? Spend "A Day at the Newsstand" with Harry Thomas (page 27), a story of a nostalgic moment in his rebirth of excitement in comic books during the Silver Age. In Silver & Gold, Dr. J. Keith Contarino takes us into his "True Golden Age of Comics" from that precious time period in youth when comics are very exciting. Even more nostalgic, Jack Mallette shares with us "The Lost Gap Collection" somewhere in Mississippi, his first unforgettable encounter with Superman in Action #1. These stories might jog some of your own memories of how you became "true fans of comic books" yourselves.

I hope you enjoy this issue, and please feel free to contribute any suggestions to us that you might have.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

This Fan's Not Out Of Breath

I couldn't help putting my pen to paper after reading Mr. Contarino's piece in issue #9 on undervalued Silver Age books. I can understand sharing his research with us and relating his findings, but in his choice of words describing Adventure #247, " . . . put me out of breath . . ." he seems almost desperate in trying to convince us. Where did he find that elusive near mint issue that now he wants to sell? By the way, there's a near mint to mint copy as you turn the cover back in the same issue: how about that? Besides, who's this Green Lantern guy anyways, compared to those three lovable teenagers of the 30th Century?

A Genuine Apology: No "Bones" About It

Last issue I had listed for sale two copies each of Bone #1 and #2. As you all know, this is an extremely popular book–and we had many orders. As you all also know, I published Sean Linkenback's phone number at his store, Showcase Collectibles, as someone is always there during business hours to take orders. I am a veterinarian. I enjoy comics and do it as a hobby. I cannot usually be reached during the day, and very few people have my home phone number. Consequently, Sean and I are in constant communication.

Apparently, Sean took a few orders for Bone #1 and #2, not realizing I had already sold them. To make matters worse, it was a few days before he could reach me. We were expecting more in, but they did not materialize.

So, I did the only thing I could. I sent everyone their money back with a note that if we got more in, I'd send them out immediately. I did not deposit any checks, and no one lost any money.

I'm sorry for any inconvenience and can certainly understand collectors' frustration, and for this I apologize–but things like this occasionally happen. I can safely say that not a week goes by where someone doesn't do what they said they would. Sean gets calls daily from people with collections or specific books that "are on the way." I've learned over the last 25 years to expect to be disappointed. The Bone comics in question are a good example. We were promised more that never arrived. We're disappointed, too.

I have everyone's name on file who ordered, and I promise if I get any more in, I will call them immediately and ship the comics out the next day. The price will be the same as advertised, and they can pay me after they receive their books.

Thanks for listening.

The End of the Golden Age

Well, I knew there was still a question as to when the Silver Age ended (if, indeed, it has–more later) but it was news to me that the end of the Golden Age was also in dispute, or better said, ever was.

Just for the record, it was a fan by the name of Jerry Bails who originally coined the terms and, unless my memory banks fail me, he defined the Golden Age as having began with the appearance of Superman in Action Comics #1. I don't recall any fan scholars questioning this or if there is any reason they should. At the risk of belaboring the obvious, two significant things resulted from the publication of Action #1. The first was that the comic-book business, previously little more than a stepchild to the might and prosperous newspaper syndicates, was elevated to the rank of an industry. Indeed, the conspicuous success of Superman and the unprecedented circulation figures racked up by Action got the attention of people in the magazine business who, to my way of thinking, would have otherwise paid scant attention to the marginal enterprise of repackaging newspaper comics for public consumption.

Maybe Fawcett (which put out such world-beaters as Mechanix Illustrated and True Magazine) and the lofty and near Olympian Curtis Publishing Company (which put out the Saturday Evening Post) would have gotten around to adding comics to their magazine lines. All I know is, this didn't happen until after Superman appeared. And I think its also revealing that Fawcett's entry into the field was something called Whiz Comics. And the star of Whiz was Captain Marvel. I don't think there's any question that there would have never been a Captain Marvel (not to mention untold legions of spandex-clad crime fighters) had Superman not set a precedent of spectacular sales.

I think I understand the trend toward revisionism in so far as expanding the boundaries of the Golden Age. If the period from 1933 through 1938 could be included within the parameters of that magic phrase it means, simply, that the books are worth more money. This is a trend I've decried (indeed, I think I wrote in exactly one year ago to protest same) since it started. Also erroneous is the habit of terming comics of the fifties as being Golden Age. So far as I know, there is no term or age to describe the comics produced between 1949 and 1956. And in 1956, of course, the Silver Age was launched.

Less comprehensible is the rationale behind compressing the parameters of the Golden Age which, unless the cutoff year of 1945 is a typo or misprint, means there's a movement afoot to trim four years from the original time span!

To the best of my recollection, Bails concluded that the Golden Age officially ended in 1949, when the last issue of Green Lantern rolled off the press. I don't know what Jerry has to say about the end of the Silver Age, but if we apply the Bailsian yardstick of the tenure of Green Lantern, it seems to me that we must still be in it. The retooled character that Julius Schwartz introduced in the place of the original 1940s character is still with us. The uniform design hasn't changed and the title hasn't been canceled. Ergo, the Silver Age hasn't ended.

Regarding the early days of comics fandom, here's some results of research into the origins of the very first comic book price guide, according to Bill Spicer, a Los Angeles fan:

Argosy Price Guide Update, direct from mouth of Malcolm Willits himself. Good thing I followed hunch and checked into this with him, because it develops Argosy bookshop and resultant '65 price guide had nothing to do with Willits & Leonard Brown after all. Much to my consternation, when I realize the old memory bank could be off that far.

Argosy was a hole-in-wall Hollywood store run by a young married couple recalled by Malcolm as Dave and Virginia, their last name presently beyond Malcolm's recollection but maybe can be ferreted out, if you absolutely need it, in one of his old address files at home. Argosy retail operation short-lived, closing shop around 1968-69 when Dave and Virginia divorced. Price guide they produced was almost certainly a one-shot. Willits concurs that, yeah, there's little doubt it would have to qualify as first comics price guide, predating Overstreet's as it does by five or six years. How it was received by fandom at large isn't known to me or Willits, but most likely it didn't make much impression or inroads., at least not to extent Overstreet's more elaborate version later did. Also unknown to me, and an intriguing point to consider, is whether Bob ever saw Argosy price guide in sixties and took it as inspiration to eventually produce his own.

Dave and Virginia, Willits adds, were somewhat amateurish in field, never really moving much past neophyte stage in retail and mail-order. And then, when bookstore closed, they apparently both returned to regular jobs, Virginia being a school teacher. Where perhaps she remains to this day, for all we know.

The above is excerpted from a letter from Bill Spicer, a Los Angeles fan presumably missing in action since the earthquake. It turns out he wasn't affected by the quake, but just got behind in his correspondence.

I don't know that the identity of the couple who produced the first-ever price guide is all that important. The main thing is that Spicer correctly recalled buying a copy (circa 1965) at Willit's Hollywood-based store. And Willits himself recalls having it in stock. So (unless this is a practical joke cooked up by Spicer and Willits) the artifact is a bona fide precursor to the 1970 CBPG.

What I can't understand is why the existence of a precursor to the price guide isn't more widely known. Evidently this mysterious couple never offered the publication for sale by mail, which is kind of a puzzle in itself.

I can't imagine why they'd go to the trouble of producing the thing if they weren't going for a market broader than the Los Angeles contingent of collectors . . .

Give me Substance, Not All the Glitter

I am here with an axe to grind and I will freely admit it. What's my problem, you ask? Nothing that others haven't noticed or chose to ignore in the comic industry. Yes, that's right, I am talking about the amount of garbage being thrown at me at every conceivable angle. The comic companies are literally "chumming" the waters to get me to bite at the not-so-tasty morsels. I'm no shark, nor am I a guppy! Diversity is the key in any industry to stay alive, but it seems we have too much.

It is true that one man's garbage is another man's treasure, but let's get real. The companies are just producing mindless dribble to "hook" my dollar. I get taken occasionally, but don't we all? I buy comics to read, and if the book turns a profit, so be it. But are the companies producing books to read? No, they are too busy thinking of gimmicks to peddle their wares. Sure, you can name exceptions, but it is not the rule. If it wasn't true, then why do some companies produce the same issue with cover A, and at the same time, alternate gimmick cover B? Don't tell me it is so the young kids can afford the book with the lower price. You honestly think they want the plain, not-so-flashy cover? NOT . . .

The companies are so busy trying to flood the market that they don't even consider the problems with continuity. You always read about some new artist who is going to "fix" this problem down the road for them and will neatly tie it all together. It is his job to put a band-aid on the whole problem until they do it again next agenda, affair or whatever they choose to call it now. Don't get me on the subject of multiple titles for the same character.

All I am basically trying to say is wake up. Stop the nonsense. Go for substance, not the glitter you see. So what if it comes triple poly-bagged with a titanium limited edition glow-in-the-dark card. Does this make the story better? I love comic books for what they represent, not what they will be worth later. Next time ask a fellow collector if they have read any good stories lately and not, "did you see that cover?" By the way, at the next convention ask one of the writers of your favorite cancelled title what happened and why they are writing "fluff" stories for the "flashy" covers. Helpful hint: duck!

There Are All Sorts of Collectors

Thank you for the latest issue of Comics Source and congratulations on a fine article, "Making the Grade."

I've always had a tendency not to split hairs or get as technical (very fine near mint 8 on a 1-10 scale) as this lends itself to being so subject to interpretation and opinion. It is rarely the occasion that the seller and the buyer are going to agree beyond the basic condition, which places the comic in a ball park price range, subject to negotiation of course, but perhaps the hair splitting definitions could serve either party with some negotiating ammo, if both are willing and have the patience (and time) to debate the issue that long. In that context, I can see where such an elaborate grading system might be appreciated. By now you're down into an area of the final outcome being a small amount of money, one way or the other, on many comics.

But, then comes a real problem: whose figures are each of you using? If all of this haggling is going to produce the desired effect, it would seem that you are going to have to be relying on the leverage of using the highest value, as found in one guide, and the lowest, as found in another, back to a debate that could linger on into the afternoon hours. Meanwhile, others are traveling through the convention, say at a medium pace, lingering only long enough at each dealer's booth, to grab up the comics needed for a particular collection, attempting to get as many as possible for X amount of dollars, and taking what seems to be priced fair, while leaving those that appear to be overpriced. The only exception to this scenario might be when one comes across a comic that is sorely needed, or one very hard to find.

I am a somewhat different type collector. I am much more interested in quantity than quality. Collecting Western comics only, my dream to accomplish before I leave this earth, is to have a copy of every issue of every Western comics title published 1930s-1960s. I like knowing about every one of them. I want to know what the cover looks like, what the story titles are, who the artists are throughout the comic, and what ads appear. Information and documentation is my bag entirely. I had many of them as a kid, and I want them back, any way I can get them. It would be heavenly to have a mint copy. Then so on and so forth, right on down the line to a coverless copy, with a few pages missing, the worst possible copy. But, I would rather leave the convention with a sackful of various comics needed to fill holes in my collection at various grades than to spend the day haggling over two comics in very fine to near mint condition, and leaving there with just those two. Bottom line is, when I get to the computer that evening, I only have two comics of which I am totally knowledgeable, that I can document thoroughly in my computer. I can sit and marvel over the two nice comics, and the condition they are in, and lose a lot of sleep over the other eight I left behind. And, had I picked up the ten comics, most would not only have been in "enjoyable" condition (they can be handled without the fear of them falling apart in your hands), but they would even have been photographic (no chunks out of the covers, ink markings, badly faded out, etc.). This is another area that is important to me, as I write articles on comics. I would rather be able to produce photographs of five comics say, than two, at any given time.

Looking over my collection of several thousand comics, one will find, as a result of my buying method, comics in every possible and imaginable condition including many average and above average there. In the strictest sense, probably no perfect ones, unless it's one to five. There was one Roy Rogers comic that I needed to complete my collection for over two years. I called dealers all over the U.S. and Canada. It simply could not be found. I had to have it for the purpose of documentation, for I was doing a Roy Rogers Com-icography, the first-of-it's-kind for the big Roy Rogers book coming out in the fall.

A friend finally sent me a photocopy of the entire comic. I cut and pasted it all up, just as if it were an original. Then I was able to thoroughly document it. (I had seen a color photo once of the cover.) Still, it irked me, always a burr under my saddle, that this was a comic of which I still had to have an original copy to complete my collection. It was embarrassing having only a photocopy.

Finally, I came upon a copy in very nice condition except the top third of the cover was missing. I purchased it for two dollars and placed it beside the photocopy in my collection. Things had improved a little bit. Now, I've seen the inking and colors throughout the comic. But, I still couldn't photograph it. Finally I found a collector who had the comic, and he sent me a perfect color laser copy of the cover. I cut out the part needed to complete my partial cover, taped it on the inside, and photographed it. I've come a long way. The only thing that would be any better would be to have an above average copy. That is not to say that my copy is average. But, it photographs well enough that it would take an above average copy to beat it.

The cost of average to perfect comics would prevent me from ever accomplishing my goal: I would just have to give it up. However, the way I buy, I may one day have a complete Western comics collection. For nostalgia purposes, and for purposes of documentation of what was published, it will be one important collection.

I came across a box once with six comics covers. Before the year was out, I had picked up the six comics, all coverless, or with covers in very bad condition, and put all of the best parts together.

There are many sorts of collectors–thought I'd share this with you. Given a choice of a truckload of comics (all conditions) or a few boxes of mints, the sound of that truck engine is music to my ears.

An Introduction to the Golden Age of Comic Books

Part II

By Ron Goulart

DC got more enthusiastically into the superhero business in 1941, when More Fun Comics #52 (February 1940) introduced the Spectre. Written by Superman's Jerry Siegel and drawn by Bernard Baily, the feature was one of the relatively few in which the hero began his career by dying. In the first segment of the two-issue origin story, tough redheaded cop Jim Corrigan was knocked off in classic gangland fashion by being tossed into the river in a barrel of cement. His spirit flew heavenward and a great light, presumably God, gave him a little pep talk — "Your mission on Earth is unfinished . . . You shall remain earthbound battling crime on your world, with supernatural powers, until vestiges of it are gone!" Saddled with what was obviously a full-time job, Corrigan plummeted back home. In some mystical fashion his spirit was able to go around looking like his late body, down to sincere business suit and conservative tie. He decided, however, that he ought to have a costume in which to fight crime and readers saw him sewing up one. Donning a green cloak and somehow making the pupils of his eyes disappear, Corrigan became the Spectre.

His early adventures were fairly strange. He had frequent conversations with the Almighty, made occasional trips to the hereafter to get clues from departed souls and once went "into the depths of infinity," which was mostly clouds, in search of a supernatural villain. He could walk through walls, turn criminals into skeletons, and grow as tall as a downtown office building. A grim fellow, the Spectre enjoyed destroying crooks. "One less vermin to peril decency," he observed after one such bit of vigilante work.

More Fun added another weird hero a few months later in #55 (May 1940). Dr. Fate was an invention of writer Gardner Fox, drawn in a stylized creepy fashion by Howard Sherman. "Dwelling apart from mankind in his lonely tower north of ghost-ridden Salem is the mysterious Dr. Fate," explained an early caption, "who calls upon secret and ancient sources for the power with which he fights unusual crimes." Certainly unusual. Fate, who wore a blue and gold costume and a metal helmet that completely covered his face, specializing in beating ancient Mayan gods, combating globemen from outer space, defeating horrors summoned from the cosmic void and counseling young women who feared they might be wereleopards.

Johnny Quick, King of Speed, zipped onto the scene in #71 (September 1941). He got his swiftness by reciting the formula "3X2 (9YZ) 4A," which was a bit trickier to toss off than "Shazam." Aquaman, which was DC's answer to the Sub-Mariner was added in issue #73, as were the Green Arrow and his boy sidekick Speedy. More likeable that the ghostly Spectre or the mystical Dr. Fate, Green Arrow and Speedy, "wizard archers of the world," soon became the stars of the magazine.

The first true superhero to grace the pages of DC's Adventure Comics was Bernard Baily's Hour-Man, who was introduced in #48 (March 1940). A caption explained that a young scientist named Red "Tick-Tock" Tyler had recently discovered "Miraclo, a powerful chemical that transforms him from a meek, mild scientist to the underworld's most formidable foe . . . with Miraclo he has for one hour the power of chained lighting-speed . . . But unless he performs his deeds of strength and daring within one hour, the effects of Miraclo wear off and the Hour-Man becomes his former meek self."

Adventure's next superhero was auspiciously launched in #61, getting the leadoff position. Starman was yet another laconic and mild mannered playboy who moonlighted as a crime fighter. He flew by holding tight to his gravity rod. Artwork was by Jack Burnley, with the majority of scripts by Gardner Fox. The Shining Knight followed in #66, nicely drawn by Creig Flessel. Wearing golden armor and mounted on a winged horse, the Knight had been frozen for several centuries. Thawed out, he became a sort of reverse Connecticut Yankee. The character who was to unseat all of the magazine's hopeful heroes had been around for awhile, but nobody had been paying much attention to him of late. Then in #69 (December 1941) the Sandman got a new look — an updated costume with yellow tunic and tights, purple cowl, cape and boots and a boy companion named Sandy. Chad Grothkopf wrought these changes and left after one issue, followed for two more by Paul Norris. Then came Joe Simon and Jack Kirby who turned the venerable avenger into a hit.

DC's penultimate entry on its monthly list was Star Spangled Comics, which went on sale August 6, 1941. The designated stars were the Star Spangled Kid and Stripesy — "arch-foes of hate and intolerance, champions of LIBERTY and JUSTICE, the embodiment of the TRUE AMERICAN SPIRIT! In short, they are . . . YOU!" Jerry Siegel provided the scripts and gag cartoonist Hal Sherman, having his first try at straight adventure, was the artist. The initial issue offered two stories about the kid, who was a bored rich young man in real life and had for a sidekick a full-grown adult, who was his chauffeur in real life. The introductory story ran an unprecedented 20 pages and there was a second one running 15. Sharing the lineup were Captain X, a phantom flyer who defended England in an atomic-powered airship; the Tarantula, who wore a purple and yellow costume to fight crime — "he weaves a web of doom around the lifelines of the underworld;" and Armstrong of the Army, an intelligence officer.

Apparently, the lineup didn't make a hit. With #7 (April 1942) Star Spangled got a drastic overhaul. Simon and Kirby drew the streamlined cover that introduced the Newsboy Legion and their costumed mentor, the Guardian. The Kid and Stripsey were relegated to one story at the back of the book. Robotman, produced initially by the Superman shop, and TNT, aided by Dan the Dyna-Mite, were added to the staff to replace Captain X and Armstrong.

Late in 1938, M.C. Gaines entered into an agreement to produced a series of comic books that would be published under the DC umbrella. The initial titles, edited by the youthful Sheldon Mayer, were Movie Comics and All-American Comics. Both appeared with cover dates of April 1939. While All-American featured some original material, the new magazine contained not a single superhero and relied on newspaper strip reprints to fill many of its pages. Of the several characters shown on the bright yellow cover of the first issue, only Mayer's Scribbly was an original, and the blurb announced — "The only comic monthly with all your old favorites: Mutt & Jeff, Ben Webster, Tippie, Reg'lar Fellers, Skippy..." Mayer said that Gaines, despite being instrumental in the emergence of Superman, didn't think the public would be interested in any further costumed do-gooders.

Among the original features in the early issues were Red, White and Blue, about a spy busting trio consisting of a soldier, a sailor and a marine; Hop Harrigan, Jon L. Blummer's boy aviator strip that became one of DC's more successful 1940s properties; Adventures into the Unknown, adapted from the juvenile science fiction novels of Carl H. Claudy. About the closest thing to a superhero was Ultra-Man, a futuristic adventure strip that commenced in #8 (November 1939). Set in the United States of North America in the year 2239 and starring a heroic fellow in red tunic, green shorts and eagle-crested metal helmet, the feature was another creation of Blummer's. Succumbing to superhero fever in the summer of 1940, the magazine introduced the Green Lantern in its 16th issue. There he was on the cover, all decked out in his red and green costume and charging along a girder at a tommy gun-wielding thug. The eight-page origin story inside was by writer Bill Finger and artist Mart Nodell. Irwin Hasen, who worked in a loose cartoon style version of the Milton Caniff style, ghosted most of the Lantern stories from #26 through #51 (July 1943) and drew the story in #27 that introduced the Green Lantern's unorthodox sidekick, the pudgy cabdriver Doiby Dickles.

Once All-American opened its doors to Green Lantern, other costumed crime fighters and superheroes began moving in. The Atom arrived in #19 (October 1940), followed by Dr. Midnite in #25 and Sargon the Sorcerer in #26. The cast remained stable for the next several years. Even Mutt & Jeff, long one of Gaines' favorites, hung around for almost the entire life of the magazine.

By the time Gaines and Mayer got around to planning their next title, late in 1939, things were changing and the kids who bought comic books were quite obviously more than willing to support more than one superhero. So when Flash Comics #1 (January 1940) appeared, it contained two superheroes plus a masked avenger and, for good measure, a comedy character with magic powers. Much of the new magazine was written by Gardner Fox. "I wrote everything except Johnny Thunder and the Whip," he once explained. "Both were by a fellow who lived up in Maine, John Wentworth, and the Ed Wheelan strip . . . I did Flash, Hawkman, even Cliff Cornwall."

The star of the magazine was the Flash, "the man who moves with the speed of light. Harry Lampbert was the original artist, soon followed by E. E. Hibbard. The Hawkman was first drawn by Dennis Neville and then, for a good part of its early run, by Sheldon Moldoff. Rounding out the early crew were the Whip, a Zorro impersonator; Cliff Cornwall, a daredevil secret agent; Johnny Thunder, a nitwit who was looked after by a somewhat snide thunderbolt. Ed Wheelan drew Flash Picture Novelets, which eventually became Minute Movies, a comic book version of his once popular newspaper strip.

The final Gaines-Mayer monthly, which brought the list of DC monthlies to eight, was Sensation Comics. The first issue bore a January 1942 cover date and showcased Wonder Woman, who had been introduced in All Star Comics #8 shortly before. A somewhat bizarre feature in its early days, one that went in for bondage as much as it did for crime fighting, it was the creation of psychologist William Moulton Marston and veteran cartoonist H. G. Peter. The rest of the Sensation team was, with the exception of Wildcat, minor league. Little Boy Blue headed a costumed kid gang, Mr. Terrific was just one more guy in a funny costume and the Gay Ghost was a mild variation on the more popular Spectre. Wildcat, drawn by Hasen and written by Bill Finger, had some of the same qualities they brought to Green Lantern and dealt with a boxing champ who donned an animal skin to fight crime.

One of Sheldon Mayer's more enduring inventions was All Star Comics. Begun as a quarterly, it brought together characters from various DC monthly titles. Issue #3 (Winter 1940) saw the first meeting of the Justice Society of America — with Sandman, the Atom, the Spectre, the Flash, Hawkman, Dr. Fate, the Green Lantern and Hour-Man attending. In #4, which was the first bimonthly issue, there was a theme that ran through all the stories. From then on the JSA teamed up in each issue to defend the country against spies, travel to the planets, feed the starving peoples of Europe and defeat such villains as the Brain Wave, the Psycho-Pirate and Degaton. All of the novel-length adventures were the work of the inventive and prolific Gardner Fox, with the heroes' regular artists drawing individual chapters.

Silver Age Clubhouse

The Importance of Being Franklin

By Craig Shutt

Welcome to the Silver Age Clubhouse. Now that you're here, we'll table our heated argument over which of the Wonderful Wasp's costumes we like the best so that we can begin our discussion on the dangers of having kids.

That is, having kids in the Marvel Universe. And make no mistake, it's dangerous. Just look at the Fantastic Four, as if there were another choice.

The Fantastic Four's health coverage has to do more than insure against accidental burns, stretched muscles, dry skin, and stubbed invisible toes. It's also got to repay the costs of long-term maternity care plus mileage and expenses for those pesky emergency trips into the Negative Zone to snatch the special cosmic juice needed to save the mother and newborn's lives.

Oooh, I hate it when that happens. I mean, is it too much to ask that Reed and Sue's kid come into the world in a quiet, comforting way?

You bet it is! There aren't too many rug rats in the Marvel Universe—I think they're frowned on because they clutter up the comics too much. So when one does make an appearance, we want to welcome him with a bang!

But you don't see this kind of cavalier treatment over at DC, that's for sure. I mean, when their token kid, Aquababy, was born, he was um, well, hmmm. Never mind.

In the case of the Fantastic Four Kid, not only was his birth every bit as traumatic as Reed and Sue's wedding, his entire gestation was no day at the beach. (The Fantastic Four Kid didn't get his name, Franklin Benjamin Richards, until Fantastic Four #94, more than a year after his birth. So I think it's only fair early on in our story to call him "the Fantastic Four Kid.")

It all began in "Divide—And Conquer" in Fantastic Four Annual #5 (November, 1967), when Reed and Sue make the big announcement about their impending bundle of joy. Actually, it probably began during their vacation in Wakanda when they met The Black Panther back in Fantastic Four #52, but that's none of our business, is it?

They'd been married since Fantastic Four Annual #3 (November, 1965) two years earlier, so don't bother counting backwards, you scandalmongers. Even in Marvel time that ought to cover whatever possibilities inquiring minds want to consider.

The gang rejoices, especially Ben, whom Sue asks to be the godfather. The news even takes their minds off the fact that some goofball called Psycho-Man broke into the Baxter Building, roughed up the Thing, and retrieved a package that had been misdelivered.

I have that same problem with my mail service, although that's not how I usually handle it. But then I'm not called Psycho-Man, contrary to what some people might tell you.

Naturally, Reed isn't too excited about adventuring with a wife who's pregnant. But that doesn't stop the Thing and Torch who promptly light out after Psycho-Man. And because this is an annual, they team up with the Black Panther and the Inhumans to do battle. Stan and Jack really gave us our money's worth back then!

Too bad childbirth isn't as easy as beating the beejeebers out of weird-looking guys like Psycho-Man! The always overprotective Reed keeps a tight leash on Sue in the next few months, particularly after she becomes involved in their fight with the Mad Thinker.

In Fantastic Four #71 (February, 1968), Reed decides he and Sue have to leave the Fantastic Four until the baby is born. But you can't keep a battling brainiac like Reed Richards on the sidelines, especially when the Watcher says that the Silver Surfer has blown a gasket and is attacking Earth.

So Reed returns in Fantastic Four #72 and spends the next few months away from the old ball and chain. Instead, he gets to hang out with the Surfer, Daredevil, Spider-Man and Thor and beat up on Galactus and Psycho-Man—again. Don't these guys ever learn?

Mrs. Fantastic's kind of peeved by this, but her condition takes a turn for the worse and she becomes bedridden in Crystal's hotel room. Sue ends up hospitalized in Fantastic Four #78 (September, 1968) and those bills start adding up, because in the hospital, things just keep going sour. In issue #79 (October, 1968), Reed discovers that his wife's blood cells are pulsating with strange electro-flashes.

Stretcho surmises that they're caused by those wondrous cosmic rays that pelted Sue when he invited her and her kid brother along on his trip to the moon. That day the lights were on but nobody was home, if you know what I mean.

"I've got to tell Sue!" Reed decides, walking down the hall to his wife's room. "She has every right to know! But I know in my heart—that I can't!"

I don't see why not, Reed. Any woman who would hop into a souped-up rocket with her boyfriend to fly to the moon can handle a little bad news on occasion!

By Fantastic Four Annual #6 (November, 1968), the dung has really hit the ventilating device, as Reed would say. He realizes that his family's only chance depends on him paying another visit to the Negative Zone.

Recognizing a great opportunity to alter their minds without the use of artificial drugs, Johnny and Ben convince Reed to include them. So high ho, high ho, it's off to the Zone we go!

The action heats up as soon as we're past that incredible two-page Kirby photo montage. Reed gets captured; then Ben and Johnny do likewise trying to find Reed.

Their host turns out to be the always-bizarre Annihilus. Recognizing Stretcho's incredible intelligence, our future action figure tells his life story to Mr. Fantastic. During his spiel, he lets it slip that the Cosmic Control Rod attached to the front of his costume is the ideal method for eliminating cosmic radiation from the bloodstreams of pregnant women! What a lucky break for our heroes!

Since our Fantastic Three have superpowers, and Annihilus is a typical mad villain, he's required by Marvel law to toy with them prior to killing them. So he suits up in a great Kirby Kontraption and pits our boys against a Negative Zone version of the Danger Room. Highlights include a gigantic granite boot and the All-Engulfing Sonic Sponge, a creature we see far too little of today.

Needless to say, guess who ends up with the Cosmic Control Rod and three tickets on Annihilus's Rail Plane out of there?

With half an annual left, you know it's not going to be an easy trip back to reality. But in the final standoff, Reed manages to siphon off some of the cosmic juice into a handy empty vial. He flings the rod in the other direction, Annihilus chases it, and Reed and the boys turn on the afterburners.

"When we reach home, I'll try to seal off the entrance to the Negative Zone—forever!" Reed vows. Oh yeah. Tell us another one.

They rush to the hospital so they can hang out in the waiting room. All that blood and icky stuff probably would have made Reed faint, the poor dear.

Finally, Alicia breaks the news: "Mr. Richards . . . you're a father! It's a boy!" The doctor adds, "Mother and child are both doing fine!" And Alicia chimes in again with, "He's an absolute darling!"

Better enjoy that while you can, Reed. It won't last too long.

Needless to say, after Sue's adventures in childbirth, she doesn't bound out of bed and return to pounding on dastardly villains like the All-Engulfing Sonic Sponge.

HE SEEMS SO HELPLESS...SO TINY... IN A WORLD THAT'S SO GIGANTIC... SO FILLED WITH UNKNOWN DANGERS!
WE'LL NEVER STOP TRYING TO MAKE THIS NUTTY WORLD OF OURS A BETTER PLACE...
HE'S NOT GONNA HAVETA WORRY ABOUT DANGER, PAL... NOT WITH US AROUND!
SO THAT HE... AND ALL THE OTHER LITTLE CHILDREN EVERYWHERE... CAN GROW UP IN PEACE AND BROTHERHOOD!
TO WHICH WE SAY...
AMEN!
THE BEGINNING!

Marvel's official rug-rat enters the world in Fantastic Four Annual #6 (November, 1968) after his dad, uncle, and godfather go traipsing through the Negative Zone to ensure he gets the chance. His name? Hey, we're working on it!

To pick up the slack, Crystal of the Inhumans cobbles together her own mod version of a Fantastic Four uniform in issue #81 (December, 1968) and makes her case for joining the team.

By the bottom of page two, Johnny's on her side. But her cogent arguments probably had less to do with it than all that cuddling and smooching at the top of the same page.

After that issue's battle royal with the Wizard, even Reed agrees that Crystal has her moments. So she fills the gap created by Sue who is looking after the Fantastic Four Kid.

The Invisible Mother finally returns in dramatic fashion in "The Victims" in Fantastic Four #86 (May, 1969), in which she saves the Fantastic Four's collective butts in a big to-do with Doc Doom in Latveria. It's a great story, but then it's in the Fantastic Four's first 100 issues, so you don't need me to tell you that.

Sue remains on the sidelines with the Fantastic Four Kid for a few more issues, no doubt spending most of her time reading baby-naming books. Meanwhile, the others whale the tar out of the Mole Man, the Skrulls, and the Frightful Four.

In issue #94 (January, 1970), the Fantastic Four Kid finally becomes Franklin Benjamin Richards, named after Sue and Johnny's father Franklin and the Thing.

A few pages later, with that darned baby-naming problem finally out of the way, they take Frank up to Whisper Hill in upstate New York and plunk him down with his new "child-rearing specialist," Agatha Harkness.

Actually, if they'd spent more time checking out sitters' references and less time agonizing over Frank's name, they might have saved themselves a little trouble later on. But never mind.

By issue #95 (February, 1970), Sue is back to brawling with the Fantastic Four. It's a good thing too, because Crystal has been ordered home by Black Bolt. When Medusa comes and forcibly takes her, our team ends up one female short.

Crystal signs on as Sue's replacement in Fantastic Four #81 (December, 1968), while Sue spends her days rummaging through her baby books looking for a decent name for the kid, who won't get his monicker for another year or so.

Needless to say, Johnny isn't too pleased by this turn of events. But he soon has other things on his mind, as indicated by that issue's title, "Tomorrow, World War Three!"

We fans soon have other things on our minds too. The King has but six issues left on his incredible Fantastic Four run, leaving after #101 (August, 1970). That's as good a curtain-closer on the Silver Age as I know of, and it would have been a shame if Susie had missed that one.

Have a great topic for discussion here in the Silver Age Clubhouse? Send it along in care of Comics Source at 2401 Broad St., Chattanooga, TN 37408. Otherwise, next month we may end up talking about the serum that was needed to save Aquababy's life! Ooh, I'd hate to see that happen.

Down Memory Lane

By Harry Thomas

Looking back over 30-plus years of collecting and dealing, one of my favorite comic book memories is the thrill of my uncle handing down his comic book collection to me when I was about six years old. His books were from the late '30s through the mid '40s. The excitement these colorful treasures brought to a poor country boy was beyond description. Sad to say, the majority of the books were sold over the years, mostly during college to help defray the expenses of education. They furnished many years of fun along the way, though.

The most outstanding moment I remember about comic books, however, happened in 1956 when I was a high school freshman. By then, I was already out of comics and very active in science fiction fandom. I owned a beautiful collection of pulp magazines (my favorite was Street and Smith's Unknown!).

I bought my science fiction magazines at a little cigar and magazine store in Sweetwater, Tennessee called Martin's. Although I wasn't buying comics at that stage in my life, I always gave the comic book spinner rack a whirl. Most of the time I was disappointed to see the same boring books that had caused me to lose interest in the medium. I loved super heroes, but the only super heroes left in 1956 were Superman, Batman, and Wonder Woman, and they were just plain awful.

On one of my visits, as the rack turned to my spin, I caught sight of something that caused my attention to go on instant alert—two words that immediately rekindled my interest in comics—The Flash! The book's title, Showcase, didn't even register: only The Flash!

Nostalgia overwhelmed me—all those heroes of my past marched before my eyes: The Flash, Green Lantern, Hawkman, Human Torch, Captain America, on and on. I can't express the feelings that seeing Showcase #4 on the newsstand brought to me (and thousands of others like me). How was I to know that the rebirth of comic book excitement had just happened? I know this much: at that point I started buying comics again. Although I didn't know it, the Silver Age had begun. Comic books were back!

So, based on first hand experience, let's put to rest any notion of Detective #225 being the first Silver Age book. Nobody was buying Detective and even fewer people cared about the back up feature in the book. But a world of readers cared about The Flash. We couldn't wait for more! And the sales, of course, proved it. No single comic magazine from the '50s had the impact of Showcase #4. It jump-started everything. More titles and characters would come, the excitement would grow, but nothing would ever again evoke that sense of wonder created by the reintroduction of The Flash!

Have an interesting anecdote, a story you'd like to share with other collectors? Tell us about your most memorable purchase, your best find, your fondest memories of going to a convention, buying comics off the newsstand, meeting a comic book VIP, trading comics with the kid down the street, or your worst collecting mistake. Anything you think readers would enjoy, we'd like to see. But keep it short, no more than 800 words. Send your story to Comics Source Anecdote, 2401 Broad Street, Chattanooga, TN 37408.

My True Golden Age of Comics

By Dr. J. Keith Contarino

With all the emphasis placed on value and investments in comics, we all too often forget the excitement we felt as kids when we were avidly collecting comics. A good friend of mine once told me the true Golden Age of comics is whatever years happened to fall when you were 9-14 years old, that time period where one is old enough to begin to flourish intellectually, while still retaining enough of the child within to be able to appreciate fantasy, and to truly get carried away by things such as comics and movies. Of course, it helps when the comics being created in that time frame are inherently bold, vital, interesting, innovative, fresh and daring.

Such was the state of the art in my true Golden Age, 1961-1966. What a time to be a youngster approaching the teenage years! I had learned to read with Tom and Jerry and had eagerly devoured literally every comic I could get my hands on from 1958 onward. Two highlights stand out—it was Easter, 1959, when my mother, instead of a huge chocolate bunny, put a rolled up copy of Flash #105 as the centerpiece of my Easter basket. It was hidden behind my grandmother's television (black and white console, of course). This was my first exposure to the Flash, as I had somehow missed all four Showcase issues. I managed to find a copy of No. 13 at the Lynchburg Coin Shop a few months later, and I devoured every issue of Flash from 106 through 144. I was the fastest kid in my class, and the Flash was my hero. It was years afterwards (1974 I believe) that I saw my first non-reprint copy of Showcase #4. The story was totally believable. My parents bought Frankenstein's monster being brought to life via lightning—what was so unbelievable about lightning striking a bunch of weird chemicals and making Barry Allen the Fastest Man on Earth?

The second biggy also occurred in 1959 in Newburgh, NY. My mother used to bring me to my cousin Alan's and we'd go down to the drugstore and spend two or three dollars (a fortune in 1959!) on new comics and bring them back to Alan's room and read them over and over. To this day, I vividly remember lying on my cousin's bed reading Action #252 for the first time and getting my first glimpse of the Skirts of Steel. I was almost nine but, hey, Italian boys must produce some testosterone at an early age, as I was smitten. These two early occurrences and my exposure to Brave and Bold #28, 34, Showcase #22, 34, JLA #1 and Green Lantern #1 would pave the way to my own Golden Age. I also had a penchant for Uncle Scrooge and all the Atlas monster books being cranked out by Kirby, Ditko, Leiber, Reinman, et al. These monster books were in a class by themselves. Sure, they were hokey and often trite; but, for 10-12 year old kids, they were terrific, from the Ditko stories of intricate plot twists and people getting their just desserts (who can forget the vain man turned into a swan or the "Most Brilliant Man on Earth" being placed in a cage and treated like a moron on another planet) to the heroic earthlings of Kirby (Aieeeee!). Every issue, a "guy next door" type would defeat such unbeatable monsters as Grogg, Collosus, Mechano and — of course — Fin Fang Foom. These stories had it all. In fact, I stopped buying Strange Tales, Journey into Mystery and Tales of Suspense when Marvel started replacing one of the standard three sci-fi/monster stories with a superhero. I thought Iron Man and Thor were lame. I continued reading Tales to Astonish as the Ant Man was kind of like a sci-fi character. No one could believe he was a "super hero." What power did he have? "I can retain the strength of a normal human being while the size of an ant!" Oooohhh! Big deal—compared to the Hulk, this guy was nothing at all. And, lest we forget, issue #44 introduced us to the lovely Wonderful Wasp! Sigh! How I yearned to be the recipient of one of her Wasp's Stings!

The start of my Golden Age, 1961, brought us the Fantastic Four, as well as Amazing Adventures #1. A month later, The Ant Man made his first appearance, sans costume, in TTA #27.

I read TTA #27 but didn't see a Fantastic Four on the stands until #4 — the first appearance of Sub Mariner, whom I had never heard of. What an incredibly cool book! The Torch shaves off Subby's beard with his finger (without burning his face—no mean feat), and we see our first glimpse of a Timely comic as one of the bums is reading an old Sub Mariner. This was a major revelation. In 1962, I knew of many of the DC Golden Age characters and had heard of Captain Marvel but nothing about that other company, Timely. I didn't know who Captain America, Sub Mariner, The Torch, The Red Skull, Namora, Bucky, Toro, the Blonde Phantom, The Vision, and all the others were. Now, all of a sudden, I had a shot at a whole new world!

Marvel went absolutely wild over the next 24 months. Perhaps the EC explosion in 1952-54 rivaled it; but, for my money, nothing compares for sheer volume and quality of creativity with Marvel during that time period. Lee, Kirby, Ditko, Heck, Colan, Ayers, et al., not only invented and nurtured the original characters of the Marvel Universe, they reinvented traditional comic genres in new and exciting ways. Look at Sgt. Fury. Let's face it — as much as people today go "ga-ga" over DC war books, with the exception of Enemy Ace (who came after Fury anyway) DC war books (not counting the battles with Dinosaurs, which were pretty cool but none of us counted them as war books) were pretty traditional and pretty boring. I mean, who cared about Rock and Easy Co. or The Unknown Soldier? There was nothing remotely different or intriguing about those guys. They barely seemed human. Then along comes Fury and the boys; and, all of a sudden, we've got real live characters that we can relate to. Sure, they had some traditional stories, too; but, when had DC ever come up with anything like Lord Ha-Ha's Last Laugh or The Crackdown of Captain Flint? Where were there characters to rival Sam, Percival Pinkerton and Baron Von Zemo? Not over at DC!

The same zest and imagination Stan Lee brought to the Fantastic Four he brought to Sgt. Fury, likewise to a tremendous cast of characters—Thor, Iron Man, Dr. Strange, Spiderman, Daredevil, Galactus, The Watcher, The Puppet Master, Dr. Doom, The Green Goblin, Electro, The Hulk, Ant-Man, Giant Man, Loki, Odin, The Dread Dormammu, Nightmare, Ox, Paste Pot Pete, Magneto, The X-Men, etc.

Unfortunately, during this Marvel Explosion, the other major companies were stagnant. DC had a few gems. I, of course, loved the Flash, and his stories remained interesting, especially when the DC Golden Age characters were brought back to life, starting with Flash #123. Their reappearance was almost as mind-boggling as the discovery of The Sub Mariner and Captain America at Marvel. Flash #129,137,151, Green Lantern #40 and JLA #21 and 22 all stand out as vibrant lilies in an otherwise stagnant pond at DC. The titles I had enjoyed at 8-10 years of age (Action, Adventure, Batman, Superman, Detective, Jimmy Olson, Lois Lane, Wonder Woman, World's Finest, Superboy) were all too unreal for a 14 year old. Peter Parker was graduating from high school, going to college, having money problems, making difficult career choices, dealing with sickness and death of loved ones while Jimmy Olson was the same idiotic 19 or 20 year old cub reporter he had been for over 20 years! Marvel's super heroes with real super problems were kicking the butts of their competition's old-line heroes.

But — things were shaking at old DC. In addition to the books mentioned above, DC took its traditionally innovative tryout titles Brave & Bold and Showcase — and devoted entire issues to Golden Age characters. Brave & Bold #61 and 62 gave us the first in-depth looks at Starman and the Black Canary, as well as reprinting their first Golden Age covers, Adventure #61 and Flash #92 and the first Silver Age reappearance of Wildcat. Showcase #55 and 56 not only gave us two entire books devoted to Dr. Fate and Hourman (55, incidently, is the first Silver Age comic entirely devoted to Golden Age characters) but is the fourth reappearance of the Golden Age Green Lantern and the first reappearance of one of the greatest Golden Age villains, Soloman Grundy. Enough to startle any 13-year old.

But I will never forget going down to Peter's Newstand in Lynchburg, Virginia, and seeing the cover of Showcase #60! What an awe-inspiring book! Keep in mind that I'm a grumpy, hardened, 42 year old veterinarian who is somewhat cynical towards everything. I still get goose bumps thinking about that book. "The Most Exciting Comic Book Event of the Past 20 Years" proclaimed the cover. The return of the Spectre! What a character. I mean where had DC hidden this guy and why didn't I know about him? I have two copies of this book in my collection, one autographed by Murphy Anderson, the other by Julie Schwarz. I credit Julie with the bringing back of the great DC Golden Age characters and thank him profoundly!

The Spectre had it all: colorful, powerful, mysterious, and he wasn't even alive! This character fought as large as entire planets. He was everywhere and could do anything. No stupid foibles like "invulnerable to everything except fire" (Jonn Jonnz), or contrived weaknesses like Green Lantern's inability to control anything yellow due to impurities in his power battery (although, in fairness, the Silver Age GL was a terrific character and remained so until DC recently turned him into a broken-down alcoholic. Don't you just love the way DC has turned all its great heroes from 25-30 years ago into bums, killers, alkies, drug addicts, child molesters, etc? Isn't today's realism in comics just terrific? I'm glad my kids have these miscreants to admire, along with the likes of Wolverine and The Punisher! Thank God for Gladstone!)

In keeping with their policy at the time, DC gave us a one-page text synopsis of the history of the Spectre and reproduced Bernard Bailey's cover of More Fun #52, the Spectre's first appearance, albeit not in costume except on the cover.

The Spectre would appear in two more issues of Showcase (61 and 64) and eventually get his own short-lived series a few years later. This revival of DC Golden Age characters, coupled with the Marvel Explosion, completed my personal Golden Age, which ended with the cover dates July, 1966. All the major Marvel characters had made their first appearances by then, the last being The Black Panther in Fantastic Four #52 (you guessed it; cover date July, 1966). Sure, some of the comics still being produced were good. Jack Kirby would be on the Fantastic Four for four or five more years and was still turning out Thor. The Romita Spider-Man issues arguably had some of the best covers ever done for Spider-Man, but the stories didn't have the same zip once Ditko left. I still can't even read the Dr. Strange stories from 147 up. Only Ditko, and later Marshall Rogers, could capture the essence of this, Marvel's most complex character.

The DC main titles by this time had become horrible. The stories were dull, and DC's attempts at being "with it" were laughable, if not pathetic. They would soon begin butchering most of their good books like Justice League, and even some of the later issues of Atom and Hawkman are pretty miserable. All-in-all, a good time in retrospect for my personal Golden Age to end.

But even though the comics were changing, and I logically believe, for the worse; there were kids coming up behind me who were just as fascinated with books like Iron Man #1 as I was with Daredevil #1. DC later came out with gems like Green Lantern #76-89 and the Silver Surfer 18-issue series was terrific; but it wasn't the quality of the books at the time that was enabling kids to fall into the same enchanted realm I had five years earlier. Rather, it was the time itself. Even with all our political heroes being shot and people like Otis Redding dying, there was an atmosphere in this country that things were OK and they were going to get better for everyone, eventually. While perhaps short on substance, the comics of the '60s reflected this and did so with great enthusiasm. I think this kept going until the '60s officially ended with Watergate and was buried with our President disgracing himself and leaving office. (The coffin was closed on the '60s when President Ford issued a blanket pardon of Richard Nixon and didn't even bother to list specific offenses.) Comics began a shift in attitude; and, in the early tomid '70s, we see the anti-hero emerging in the form of the Punisher and Wolverine. Comics kind of lingered around, as did the country in the late '70s. The Jimmy Carter era started with great promise (for all his faults, President Carter was — and is to this day — a good honest human being, too good for the White House.) It ended with double digit inflation and, I believe, the second most important cultural event of that decade—the Iran hostage situation and the failed attempt at their rescue.

For the first time in America's history people were looking backwards instead of forward. When we ushered in the "what's in it for me" decade of the '80s, comics reflected this, as did comic collecting. All of a sudden, kids were more concerned with what a comic would be worth, than if they liked it. This was culminated with the idiocy we see now in new comics where hundreds of thousands of an issue are sold and not even read. Some, like Youngblood #1, are completely and totally unreadable and nonsensical, yet have escalated in value rapidly.

I am convinced had Watergate and the hostage situation not occurred, America would still be a place of idealism instead of full of the cynical people we have become. I am also convinced that these two events are responsible for the huge price increases of Silver Age comics. If we as a people were looking forward with anxious anticipation as we did in the '60s, instead of looking back with gooey nostalgia, we would not be willing to spend huge sums of money on things to surround us—to try to keep in touch with a time we felt was much better.

But the one thing that has happened which saddens me the most is we now have generations of children who will grow up without a "Golden Age" of comics of their own. Instead, they are entering into our world for a few years, buying up copies of their favorite Mass Murderer of the Month (Carnage, Venom, etc.), trying to resell their books two years later, and going merrily on their way. As an offshoot, most of the newer successful dealers of older comics could care less about the books, don't even read comics, and never have. It's a business now, and the comics are just product.

So it goes. I'm just thankful that I was able to have my own Golden Age; and, if the bottom ever falls out of the collectors/investors market, so much the better! Then I'll be able to afford to buy all the '50s and '60s comics I want! It's a shame that a 42-year old man gets more excited about comics than a 10 year old kid does, but that's exactly what's happening every time I attend a comic convention. Without an influx of "new blood" in our hobby, where will we be 10 or 15 years from now?

Q: Where would you go if you wanted access to an incredible selection of more than 13,000 old and new comic books for sale?

A: You're already here!

Shakin' The Bushes

The Lost Gap Collection

By Jack Mallette

There are places, people and events from our past that have faded into dreams.

This is a story about one of those events, and the place itself has surely passed into the realm of perpetual night, because I've spent quite a few days looking for it. Other than a few tantalizing clues and faded remembrances, it seems to have vanished completely.

Perhaps it is Mississippi's own version of Xanadu, or a similar place that appears and disappears with the mists once every thousand years. I don't know. I do know that, to a comic book collector, it would be heaven on earth.

I call it the Lost Gap collection, not only because that is the nearest location I can find to its supposed whereabouts but because the similarities to the legend of the Lost Dutchman gold mine weigh heavily on a person's mind.

Every few years or so, a tantalizing tidbit of information comes my way, unbidden, like a whisper on the wind. And whenever there is tangible evidence, like the cover to World's Best Comics #1 that turned up a few years ago, I make like Uncle Scrooge and head off into the hills with my burro and camping gear, gold fever in "them thar" eyes. I don't bring my nephews, though; they're much too young.

But I get ahead of myself.

You've heard it said that it's a crying shame that youth is wasted on the young. How about opportunities?

When I was about seven or eight years old, in the early '60s, I would sometimes accompany my father on his trips into the winterlands seeking to secure a title for an oil or gas lease. He would have to obtain signatures from all sorts of people in all sorts of places, and it often became quite an adventure.

I'll never forget this one particular excursion to the east central part of the state, near Meridian. It was so hot you could fry eggs on the hood of the car, and these were the days before the widespread use of air-conditioning. Come to think of it, in this part of Mississippi, the part that can't decide to this day whether it's the hills or the piney woods, it was before the widespread use of most things, including electricity and indoor plumbing.

Dad's quest for an elusive signature ended just before noon this particular day at an old country store and gas station on top of a hill. I remember we were hoping to make it back to Jackson before dark, but even that wasn't enough to put any extra git in Dad's gitalong.

We got out of the car and sauntered into the relative cool of the store, where I was treated to a "Co-Cola" from one of those huge red drink boxes the size of a Buick, the kind that got the drinks so cold they turned to slush when you opened them, and a Moon Pie. I always got a Moon Pie.

That day I also got a comic book. It was a war comic, I think, and I picked it out of a comic rack so overstuffed with books that it didn't creak when you turned it. It groaned.

While Dad was paying for it and playing Good ol' Boy, the owner of the place, a very large caricature of a human straight out of L'il Abner put his hams on the counter, leaned over and said, "Son, if you like funny books, you oughta head across the street. That's old man Culpepper's place, and he's the one who loads up that rack."

As he straightened up, he continued, "As a matter of fact, he's been the funny book and magazine guy in these parts purt' near far back as I can remember."

It was hard to tell how old this man was. I tried to imagine him before all the fried chicken and beer he'd obviously encountered, but I couldn't get past the axle grease and Brylcream.

I dutifully parked my rear end on the ancient wooden bench in front of the store, and I suppose I even read a few pages of the comic Dad had bought me. I'm not sure. All I can remember is gazing across that hot and dusty two-lane blacktop at an old, non-descriptive building.

This is the part of the recollection that makes me want to hire a hypnotist, someone who can magically fine-tune the focus and contrast, who can help me remember what is true and what is an unreliable amalgamation of all the other buildings in all the other small Mississippi towns where I've been. I know that, if I could just remember exactly what that building looked like, I could draw it. Then I could show it around until someone says, "Oh, yeah! That's ol' man Culpepper's place out on highway so-and-so." Yeah, and if a frog had wings, he wouldn't bust his butt every time he jumped.

It was tan, that I remember. And it was old. So old that it somehow seemed to have ceased being a separate entity, and had become a part of the landscape.

It had an awning suspended by cables that ran the length of the building, perhaps fifty feet or so, and this provided shade for the concrete sidewalk and steps that also (I think) ran the length of the building's facade. I use the term loosely, for other than the awning, steps, a door and windows with grates bolted over them, the only distinguishing feature of this building was a Barq's root beer thermometer hanging between the door and the windows. At least that's all that I can remember, and that's not enough to distinguish it from a thousand other buildings just like it.

I remember the Barq's root beer thermometer because, at some point, I'm not sure just when or how, I ended up across the street looking straight at it. Perhaps I was just curious how hot it was in the shade, but somehow I don't think that's all of it.

I recall peering in the window and seeing a figure sitting at a dusty old roll-top desk, writing under the tiny lamp that provided what seemed to be the room's only source of illumination other than the windows.

I stood there for some time, trying in vain to make out details beyond the lamp light. I'm sure he'd been aware of my presence since I had arrived, perhaps even watching me cross the highway, because finally he said, without even looking up, "Come on in out of that heat, son. I got the fan on, and you're makin' me sweat just lookin' at you standin' out there."

I crept in quietly, not wanting to disturb him, and stood near the fan letting my eyes grow accustomed to the low light. It was much cooler, and I was in no hurry to move.

I don't remember much about the interior other than some dusty boxes and machinery piled in separate corners and a calendar on the wall. It wasn't a Vargas or anything like that, because, being seven or eight years old, I would have remembered if it was. In fact, I would probably remember nothing else.

After a lengthy silence, he glanced over at me. He must have noticed my comic book, because he made some sort of remark about my being a true patron of the arts. He also must have asked what books were my favorites, because I remember telling him how I liked war comics, Spider-Man, the Fantastic Four, but most of all Batman and Superman.

Then he said, "Son, how would you like to see something? I think you'll like it."

"Sure," I said. This was the innocent age, remember.

He got out of his squeaky old swivel-chair and walked over to a door. He unlocked it, which I remember thinking was rather odd, then stopped in and turned on the ceiling light by pulling a cord.

The colors, the vivid primary and secondary colors are what I'll never forget, and the feeling! This must have been what Dorothy felt when she opened the door to her house and first stepped into Oz. Remember when it went from black and white to color? That's it.

There was a space in the center of the room big enough for three or four people to stand in, but the walls were piled floor to ceiling with comic and magazines. All I saw were the comics.

It's hard to recall exactly what was in the room. I think a part of my brain must have overloaded and short-circuited. I vaguely recall Dick Tracy. And Donald Duck. And lots of superheroes I'd never heard of before, all in comic books bigger and thicker than the one I still clutched in my hand.

But this I'll never forget.

"Son, how would you like to see the first Superman comic book?" he asked. I don't recall answering, but I do recall him reaching up on top of a stack of books, up on his tiptoes, and pulling down a bundle of comic books tied up in string. I also remember thinking that this was the first time I'd ever seen so many of one comic still tied up together. I think I knew that that was how they were delivered, but I'd never actually seen them that way.

I remember red, and yellow, and green, and a man holding up a car. I don't recall the image of Superman, nor the Action Comics logotype itself, but

I'm sure they were there. Years later, when I became a true comics fan and D.C. reprinted Action number one in the Famous First Editions series, I remember seeing that cover again and feeling like I'd just chanced upon a long-lost friend.

"Son," he said, "this comic book came out when your mommy and daddy were little."

As if on cue, the front door opened and in walked my father. He walked over to where we stood in the glare of the light bulb and introduced himself.

They stood there chatting for a few minutes and I recall Dad making some comments on the old comics and what he remembered from his early years.

Then old man Culpepper said, "Son, how would you like to have one of these books to take home?"

I hesitated for a second, then shook my head no.

I've often wondered why I did that. Perhaps it was because my father was standing there in all his intimidating presence, and he'd already bought me one comic book.

Perhaps it was because a true fan of comics and comic history was born at that moment, and somehow I considered the bundle of comics to be sacrosanct, and I didn't want to violate it.

All I know is that I declined, with no regrets at the time. I should have asked for the entire bundle.

With a shrug and a puzzled look, he placed the bundle back on top of the stack of comics, shook hands with me and my father, and we took our leave.

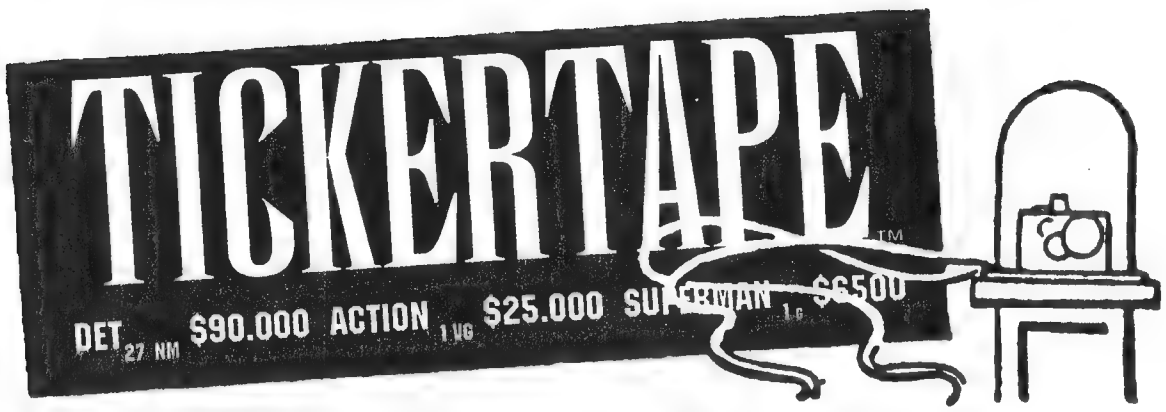
I've tried several times over the years to retrace our steps, with no success.

My father remembers little about the incident, having made hundreds of trips just like that one. He says that they've all blurred together in his mind. I've tried gentle prodding; again, no success.

One thing I feel I can say with certainly: if I had not encountered the Lost Gap collection in my youth, like prospectors who've claimed to have found the Lost Dutchman mine, I would not have become a true fan of comics, and I would not be bringing you this tale today.

Perhaps it's out there still.

Be honest, Be fair. Beware. Bye!



THE INDEX OF SOLD

ABOUT THE INDEX

TickerTape listings are comic books that have been reported to Comics Source as sold. These sales may or may not have occurred through Comics Source.

Advertisers are not required to report their sales to us—it is totally voluntary. All comic books sold through Comics Source are not included in this index, only those reported to the editors are included.

Any dealer or retailer may report sales to us. If you are a retailer and have bona fide sales to report, either from your shop, convention, or mail-order sales, please call (615) 265-5515.

Comics Source reserves the right to include only those reports that are deemed trust-worthy.

The format of the index shows the title, issue number, grade, a code for the person reporting the sale, the date the sale was reported, and the index id# which holds confidential information for our verification purposes.

USEFUL FEATURES

- Sales Comparisons—Before you sell a valuable comic, consult the TickerTape. The TickerTape serves as a useful tool for comparing sales in varying grades of condition.

- Demand Indicator— The TickerTape shows which books are experiencing heavy demand. The more reported sales for a book, the more in-demand it is. Likewise, few reported sales for a book might indicate a lack of demand, especially for more recent books.

- Rarity Indicator—Older books in highgrade condition are rare, so the TickerTape serves as an indication of how often these rare books are reportedly sold.

Kudos For The Ticker

Following is some update information per your request via the new Comics Source Tickertape. I also first want to congratulate you on this concept! I think this may be one of the most exciting reference tools since Gerber's Photo-Journal (and I'm not given to easy hyperbole). In fact, one of the concerns I've previously had with citing sales is wondering just how useful are quotes on books I've sold below guide prices? Obviously, it's more newsworthy when a book sells above guide or even for a published record price. Plus the emphasis with some guides seems to be solely for Near Mint books nowadays. But with this long overdue Tickertape index, I foresee a much more accurate record of what it takes to actually move certain books within a reasonable period of time. Also, I feel a little more secure knowing that an increase is due to actual sales, not just a programmed percentage increase (or decrease) as obviously occurs with many entries in the Overstreet Annual. Plus the timing is great! I am hearing ever-more frequent complaints against that above-mentioned industry "bible" (Does anyone really believe that Batman #100 dropped 32% in "Fine", while Iron Man #1 actually rose slightly even in "Good"???). I've pointed out to several of my gold/silver customers that Comics Source will be adding this new index, and I guarantee you will see an almost instant and significant increase in sales of your magazine. Moreover, I appreciate your including us in your first installment. The format and typeface look great, and I wish you great success on this endeavor.

SOLD (AND UN-SOLD) REPORT

High-grade '60s DCs do sell well, and we have been inching our prices progressively higher with no apparent slowdown in demand. Any '60s Marvel in any remotely - complete shape will sell if it's priced under $2 - $3. Low-grade keys sell in Marvel, even if they tend toward the pathetic in condition. We recently sold a Fantastic Four #1 that had been removed from a bound-volume, spine glued with multiple binding-thread hoiles, all four sides trimmed (but complete) for $200. The key factor is to not over-grade. The above is a complete but poor-condition book, not fair or good-minus as some might be inclined (At Detroit I saw at least one nationally-advertised dealer who graded and priced books with missing pages as "VG"!).

What is most surprising, perhaps, is what doesn't sell, or at least, doesn't move very quickly even at guide or below guide prices. The hype is on for Golden-Age, and to be sure it's getting tougher and tougher to find. But there are a lot of gold books out there that are as slow as ever, even super-hero titles, and some of the hype circulating in any number of publications might be misleading to the unwary speculator. I can sell almost any offbeat golden-age book (hero or adventure) in the $10-$30 range. But for books in the $50+ range, I have seen a definite lack of interest in some titles, especially good to fine, that I've carried through a lot of months and shows such as Airboy, National, Clue, Modern, Star-Spangled (Tomahawk issues), EC—horror, pricey westerns (low-grade cheap ones sell well), just to name a few as I scan through my collector boxes. Is it just me, or does golden-age Superman seem surprisingly slow? Action does decently when I can get them, but I ended up trading a Superman #3 in VG that just wouldn't move for cash, and I've had a number of G-VG copies in the mid to late '40s that also seem to generate a lack of interest. However, '50s Superman issues do well, though primarily in high grade. Not much interest in '40s humor unless it's cheap or a key (and cheap). These books are becoming more expensive to buy, as collectors read about gold in "gold", but really aren't selling significantly better than they have over the past few years, again, unless they are fairly inexpensive. In that regard, all golden-age has picked up, meaning that, strange as it sounds, fair or good copies of a lot of golden-age books are in more demand than high-grade copies due to the cost factor.

THE INDEX OF SOLD

Atlanta Area Report

We need a new definition of "low print runs." I'd say anything 5,000 or below like Bone #s 1 and 2. I sold two copies each at $100 and $60 and had orders for 35 more #1s and 20 #2s.

Silver Age Marvel

The days of Guide or above for high grade non-key, non-Spidey Marvels are long gone. However, and I think this is important, there are collectors out there waiting to purchase "junk Marvels" if priced right. At the last show I attended, I sold the following: Avengers #36 VF/NM - $15, #s 36, 37, 38 VF/NM - $10 each, #59 NM - $20, #s 62, 63 NM- $10; Daredevil #29 NM $15, #s 32, 36, 40 NM $10 each; #s 56, 58, NM $5 each. These sales are all 50-60% Guide — but so what? That's what they are worth. Some "better book" sales: Spiderman #1 Good $1000, #14 F+ $600, #33 NM $110, #47 NM+ $65; Avengers #1 VG $265; Avengers #11 VG $18; Sgt. Fury #13 VF/NM $150; Tales of Suspense #52 VF $125; X-Men #1 G $275; X-Men #2 F/VF $300; X-Men #12 NM $175.

DC

Lots and lots of want lists looking for 10 cent Keys in most grades. We have two people looking at the Showcase #4 in Fine we've advertised — but no sales as of yet. Mid-grades in general are tough. This happened to Marvels three or four years ago; but, as VF Amazing Fantasy #15s approach $20,000, a solid Fine at $5,000 sells. Look for the same from DC. 12 cent books must be higher grade. A friend whom I trust sold a NM Showcase #22 for $8,000 and I think that was too cheap!

THE INDEX OF SOLD

OHIO REPORT

SILVER AGE

I have clients for Amazing Spiderman, Journey Into Mystery and Daredevil. Anytime I get the issues they need to complete their runs, they are sold—period. I have sold 4 issues of Amazing Spiderman under #10 and a gorgeous Journey Into Mystery #83 in the last 3 weeks. Also, I have sold 10-12 issues under #50 of Daredevil in the last month or so. Sales on Uncanny X-Men are up and the adjectiveless X-Men issues under #10 are extremely sought after. I sold #'s 1-10 in less than two days to eager collectors. Key Silver Age in any grade moves for me. I have one client who wants all Key Silver Age Marvels. I sold him a Fantastic Four #4, Amazing Spiderman#9, Tales of Suspense #50 and Strange Tales #135 at one show and he wanted more, but I didn't have any.

DC has slowed for me in the way of Silver Age sales. I sold a Lois Lane #37 in VF for $16 at a show but not much else. I have a few key DC issues (Action #242, Adventure #271, Detective #168, Brave and Bold #34, Challengers #1) but everyone looks and not much buying going on.

GOLDEN AGE

I've recently acquired a Detective #41 (1st solo Robin) and I'll let you know next time if it's sold or not. Otherwise, sales are sporadic.

Well, that is about all for now. If anyone has solid copies (VG+, no tears) of Amazing Spider-Man #3, #6, or #10 and would like to sell them, let me know. I'd also like to thank Jon for letting all of us at All-American be a part of this revolutionary magazine. I hope to hear from some of you if you have any questions.

THE INDEX OF SOLD

Rage For Hulk vs Thing Battles

Marvel: Hulk/Thing battles have been all the rage recently. There must've been an article somewhere or something. For example: FF #113 F $65, FF #166, #167 NM $25 each, FF #320 NM $10; Hulk #122 VF $45, Hulk #350 NM $10. Otherwise, nothing out of the ordinary going on, except there seems to be a slight increase in "common" mid-grade Silver Age Marvel sales.

DC: All Silver and Golden Age DC titles are very hot! It's going to be a good summer for vintage DC sales. Some examples: Batman #50 VF $500, #110 G $60, #232 G $25; Flash #129 VF $200; Brave & Bold #50 VF $100.

BUYING DIRECT

MAIL-ORDER TIPS

For many of you, mail-order is your primary means of purchasing items for your collection. That's why COMICS SOURCE has put together the following special section. Our Mail-Order Marketplace offers a convenient place to quickly find the items you need from a wide variety of dealers and collectors. But before you shop by phone, look for the mail-order source that is best for you. Here are a few tips to help you get the most out of your buying experience.

Mail order is an excellent way to buy and sell, because it gives you instant access to more buyers, sellers and merchandise than can be found in any geographic market. But, as in any endeavor, it's smart to take precautions.

HERE ARE A FEW TIPS THAT WILL MAKE YOUR DEALINGS THROUGH THE MAIL EASY AND HASSLE FREE.

RESEARCH THE COMPANY

Well-established companies or long-time collectors tend to be reliable, but if you're not sure how well established a company or individual is, it pays to do a little research and ask a few questions. Get References. Call the publication the ad was placed in and inquire as to any complaints levied against the persons placing the ad. Comics Source blacklists any advertiser who receives three unresolved written complaints.

START SMALL

Purchase inexpensive items first, if possible. If you're pleased with the service you receive, order again.

COMPARE PRICES

If a price seems too good to be true, beware. One of the greatest features of our marketplace is the ability to quickly compare prices. If someone's price is far below what others are offering the item for, ask why. There could be a good reason, but sometimes this is a sign of a potential rip-off. We try to screen advertisers, but it's still smart to take precautions.

PAY WITH CREDIT

Whenever possible, use a credit card. Some credit card companies do such things as chargeback on unsatisfactory purchases or give a refund if you find a lower price elsewhere. If you have a problem with an order, your credit card company will often deal with the mail-order company.

BE CAUTIOUS

Keep a record of your transactions (orders, follow-up letters, phone conversations) so that you have recourse in the unlikely event of a problem.

CONSIDER USING A 3RD PARTY SERVICE

3rd party services, such as Pacific Comics Exchange, offer to act as an escrow service. Companies charge a fee for this service, but the fee is well worth it if you're spending large sums of money.

ASK FOR PHOTOCOPIES

Most reliable collectors or dealers will be only too glad to send you a photocopy or Polaroid photo of an item. Sometimes they may ask for a small fee per photo.

DELIVERY METHODS

Ask about delivery methods — find out what carriers are used, how fast they are, and how much each one costs. Record delivery information.

RETURN POLICIES

Because you're buying sight unseen, make sure the company or individual has a return policy you're comfortable with. Find out if you are responsible for paying shipping charges on returned goods and whether you'll be charged a restocking fee. A typical return policy is six days from date of receipt. If the company does not offer a return policy, don't buy!

COMPLAINT DEPARTMENT

Comics Source is committed to providing a safe and honest marketplace for buyers and sellers. Most people are honest, but, whenever money is involved one bad apple can spoil the bunch. Caveat Emptor.

ALWAYS TAKE PRECAUTIONS!

If it sounds too good to be true, IT OFTEN IS!

In our never-ending quest to provide collectors with the ultimate comic book collector's magazine, the editors of Comics Source have launched this new department The Complaint Department's goal is to keep readers informed of buyers and sellers who have been reported to have been "less than satisfactory" in their dealings with customers. Only those people who have complaints registered in writing are blacklisted in this department. The only way that someone can be removed from the Complaint Department is if all complaints are resolved. In the spirit of fairness that is the essence of mail-order buying, any advertiser who has a complaint lodged against him has the right to respond in writing to the complaint at any time after the complaint has been lodged. All correspondence will be updated and reported in this column. Advertisers who have complaints lodged against them will be prohibited from advertising in Comics Source until such time as all complaints have been resolved.

Remember, only Comics Source protects buyers in this way!

Mike Maxim
Duluth, MN

After numerous verbal complaints, Comics Source phoned Mr. Maxim on one customer's behalf. That situation is still unresolved. A written complaint from Mr. Richard Froese in Burnaby, BC is still unresolved. Several written complaints are now on file. Although Mr. Maxim came to Comics Source as an advertiser in other trade publications, he is barred from advertising in Comics Source until pending complaints are resolved to everyone's satisfaction.

Mr. Maxim has been in contact with Comics Source and appears to be making attempts to resolve complaints.

Keep watching this column for updates on this case.

Seller Beware!

Scenario: customer buys $5000 book, charges it to his credit card. You ship book. Customer returns book, unsatisfied. You send refund check. Check is cashed. But credit card turns out to be stolen. The feds close in and not only will not help you get your money back from the credit card company, but accuse you of being involved in the stolen card scheme.

Moral: Instead of sending a refund check on charge card orders, always credit the credit card account for any refunds due.

BE SAFE, NOT SORRY!

ASK FOR REFERENCES!

THEN CHECK THEM OUT! MOST PEOPLE ARE HONEST, BUT BUYER BEWARE!

MAKING THE GRADE

Comic Book Values Are Determined By Condition

by Jon R. Warren

Comic books, like movie posters, coins, stamps, sports cards, and everything else that people collect, are valued according to condition. Because human beings prize things that glitter, the more like new the book is, the more collectors will pay for it. Seems simple enough, right? WRONG!

Because talking about condition really means talking about money, buyers and sellers often have a hard time agreeing on the grade of a book. But, fortunately, there are standard terms that everyone does agree on (what those terms mean is another story). Unluckily, it takes years of looking at thousands of variances of grade before you can really be a knowledgeable grader. So how do you know what grade a comic book is in if you are new at "making the grade"? Let me suggest that you start simple and then focus in on the final grade. Here's what I mean:

PERFECT

We all know what that is, it's a book in brand new condition. When you go to the newstand and pick the best copy you can find, that's probably a PERFECT like-new comic book (unless it was mangled on the newsstand). The term for a comic book in perfect condition is MINT. Although some dealers will try to convince you that 30 or 40 year-old comic books aren't graded as strictly as new comics, I wouldn't believe it if I were you. When it comes to MINT, mint is mint. Period.

ABOVE AVERAGE

If someone bought a comic, read it once or twice, then carefully filed it away, it is in ABOVE AVERAGE condition. We refer to comics in above average condition as VF or VERY FINE.

AVERAGE

The term collectors use to describe AVERAGE is VERY GOOD or VG for short. Since comic books were meant to be read and handled, books that have been read and handled are in average condition. Creased corners, little tears, stuff that you could expect from normal use is common in a VG condition book.

BELOW AVERAGE

Comic books that you owned when you were six years old are in BELOW AVERAGE condition because you probably beat the @@#$!! out of them. And they look it! The comic is still complete with all pages, but the cover might be loose, or a piece might be missing from the corner. You know what I mean... ROUGH ROUGH! Collectors call comics in below average condition "GOOD" or "G". Actually, there's nothing good about it at all other than the fact that you have a copy to keep until a better one comes along.

POOR

A book that looks like it was rescued from the trash is in POOR condition. You know you have handled a POOR condition book when you rush to wash your hands afterwards.

Now that you know the five basic ranges of condition a comic book can be in, it's a much easier task to focus in on exactly what the real grade is. Try it yourself. Take a stack of your books and grade them. Is the first one in the stack just like the day you bought it except for a tiny bend on the corner? Then it's not MINT, but you could certainly say it is ABOVE AVERAGE. Put it in the VF stack. Does the next one in the stack look kind of read and re-read? Put it in the VG stack. Continue sorting the books by basic grades. When you are done, refer to the following detailed grading descriptions. You can focus in on the actual grade by reading these fine-tuning grading descriptions. The one that sounds the closest to the grade of your book is the actual grade.

Here are the terms that we comic book afficionados use to describe condition. Throughout the pages of Comics Source you will see these codes used to indicate grade. Memorize them, learn what they mean, and then you can start "Making The Grade".

WARREN GRADING SYSTEM™ & TERMS

The unique terms and grade definitions used here and the system of + and - to illustrate variations of grade is the Warren Grading System, © and ™ Jon R. Warren

M MINT

A Perfect 10 on a 1-10 scale. A flawless copy in the same condition as the day it was printed. The MINT grade is virtually non-existent in Pre-1970 comics*. Golden Age comics in MINT are extremely rare and fetch huge premiums over average copies of the same comic. When grading a comic mint, no consideration should be given to the age of the book. No printing defects can appear on a MINT comic. The cover should have full original gloss, and appear bright, with sharp corners and no imperfections of any sort. Minute color variations can occur during printing, and are allowed in the MINT classification. The inside covers and all pages are creamy white and fresh. The binding (spine) is tight, flat, and clean without wear or stress lines. Not the slightest blemish can be detected around staples, along the binding and edges or at corners. Arrival dates pencilled (not inked) on the cover are usually acceptable as long as they're very small. When the surfaces of the front and back covers are held to the light, not the slightest wear, indentations, wrinkles or defects of any kind can be observed. As comics must be truly perfect to be in this grade, they are obviously extremely scarce and seldom offered for sale.

MINT IS COMMON IN RECENT COMICS

*Today, most recent comics are bought by collectors and immediately sealed in protective coverings. Recent releases are usually in Near Mint to Mint condition.

NM/M NEAR MINT TO MINT

Approaching MINT but with a very slight blemish of some sort.

NM+

Top of the NM range. NM/M and NM+ are interchangeable.

NM NEAR MINT

9 on a 1-10 scale. A copy that is virtually MINT but for one or two very tiny imperfections. Like new but with tiny flaws found on most new comics. A tiny (1/16th inch) color flake missing at a staple, corner or edge, or a tiny (1/16th inch) edge tear is allowable in the category if no other imperfections are present. No crease of any kind. Superb cover gloss is present. A very few tiny stress lines along the spine could be present. Pages and covers should be creamy to white, not yellow or brown. No color touch-up, repair or restoration of any kind is allowed in this grade. This grade is very rare in books prior to 1970.

NM-

Bottom of the NM range.

VF/NM VERY FINE NEAR MINT

8 on a 1-10 scale. Beautiful, glossy and excellent in every way with only minor imperfections that keep it out of the higher grades. One tiny corner crease of less than 1/8th inch length is allowed. A couple of tiny (1/16th inch) stress lines along the spine are acceptable if the appearance of the book is not gravely affected. Pages should be creamy white, not yellowed or tan. A common defect in this grade is a tiny spine tear at the upper or lower binding (spine) not greater than 1/16th inch in length. One or two tiny tears (1/16th inch) are permitted in this grade if the copy is otherwise without flaw. An extremely tiny tear repair, microscopic dot color touch-up, unobtrusive arrival date erasure or other similar invisible alteration, on an otherwise Near Mint copy, is permitted in this grade.

VF+

Top of the VF range.

VF VERY FINE

7 on a 1-10 scale. Superb. An outstanding copy in an unusual state of preservation. Clean and bright with sharp corners and pliant interior paper. Slight cover wear is present; possibly 5 or 6 tiny wrinkles or stress lines at staples or along spine where cover has been opened a few times; still clean and flat with 80 per cent of cover gloss retained. Interior page quality should be creamy to white, not yellowish or brown. A few tiny color chips or imperfections could be present. A faint 1/4" corner crease on an otherwise exceptional copy could be present in this grade. Very minor professional restoration or repair is permitted in this grade if noted and described.

VF-

Bottom of the VF range.

FVF FINE-VERY FINE

6 on a 1-10 scale. Above Average. A clean, bright copy lacking the crispness associated with Very Fine. Pages can be slightly yellowed but not brown or brittle. Several tiny stress lines along the spine or covers can be expected. Several tiny color flakes are permitted. No subscription creases or spine roll allowed in this grade. Corners may be slightly rounded. Exceptional cover gloss remains (60 per cent or more).

F+

Top of the FINE range.

F FINE

5 on a 1-10 scale. A slightly better-than-average copy with obvious aging and diminishment, but still relatively flat, clean and glossy without subscription creases, writing on cover (except an arrival date), brown margins or tape repairs. Typical flaws include: Light spine wear, minor surface wear, a light crease (1/4" in length), minor yellowing/tanning to interior pages. Still a bright copy with 50 per cent cover gloss. A few stress lines around staples and along spine are normal in this grade, but not more than 1/8" in length. One small edge chip or several tiny chips (such as Marvel chips) are permitted in this grade. One minor tear is allowed on an otherwise FVF copy. A very minor spine roll on an otherwise clean and uncreased copy is permitted in this grade..

F-

Bottom of the FINE range.

VG/F (VERY GOOD FINE)

4 on a 1-10 scale. Better than VG+, approaching FINE but not quite sharp enough to merit the higher grade. Frequently, a FINE copy with an unusual flaw is lowered to VG/F.

VG+

Top of the VG range.

VG (VERY GOOD)

3 on a 1-10 scale. Average. Ordinary signs of use. Appears used, but not abused. The common state of preservation of a comic book that has been used as intended. Significant diminishment of original cover glossiness. Noticeable discoloration or fading could be present. One or two minor markings on covers is permitted. Minor binding (spine) rolling may have occurred. Lightly creased along spine or extremities; a faint subscription crease is allowed. The covers could have a minor tear or crease where a corner was folded under. The centerfold could be detached or loose from the staples. A small chip or piece from the covers, or a small piece from an interior page that does not affect the live area (artwork area), is acceptable. Pages and inside covers could be tannish or yellowed, but not brittle. A small tape repair could be present in this grade. Still, the appearance of the comic is such that many collectors find the book acceptable until a finer copy can be located.

VG-

Bottom of the VG range.

G/VG GOOD VERY GOOD

2 on a 1-10 scale. Approaching VERY GOOD, with too many signs of abuse to be a solid VERY GOOD. G/VG and G+ represent a very slight variation in grade.

G+

Top of the GOOD range.

G GOOD

1 on a 1-10 scale. Below average. A worn copy but complete with all pages including centerfold, which may or may not be loose. Creased, scuffed, covers lack gloss, faded. Pages could be brown and brittle. Although a copy in this grade could have white pages and covers, the accumulation of defects such as creases, tears or chips and general wear prevent the book from a higher classification.

G-

Bottom of the GOOD range.

FR/G

Approaching GOOD, with too much wear to be a solid GOOD. FR/G and FR+ are interchangeable.

FR+

Heavily worn but approaching the GOOD classification.

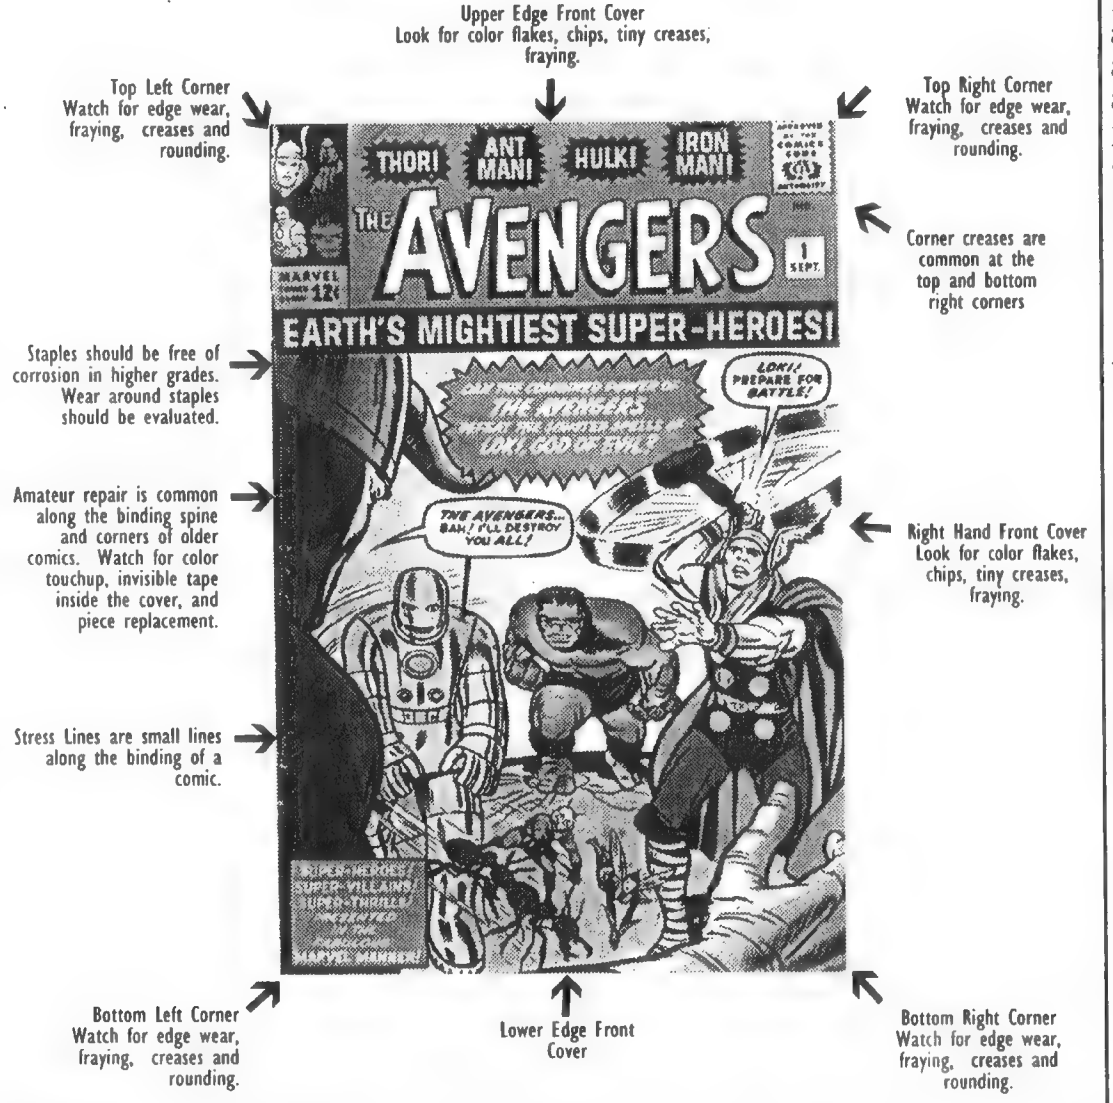
FR FAIR

1/2 on a 1-10 scale. Used and abused. Extremely worn, creased, and dirty, with possibly loose pages or significant tears, but still complete. Possibly small pieces missing from the cover, inked markings, tape, etc.

P POOR

0 on a 1-10 scale (is that possible!). A terrible copy. Damaged; extremely worn; dirty; or otherwise unsuited for collection purposes. Pages could be missing. Could be coverless if noted.

GRADING TIPS



Upper Edge Front Cover
Look for color flakes, chips, tiny creases, fraying.
Top Left Corner
Watch for edge wear, fraying, creases and rounding.
Top Right Corner
Watch for edge wear, fraying, creases and rounding.
Corner creases are common at the top and bottom right corners
Staples should be free of corrosion in higher grades. Wear around staples should be evaluated.
Amateur repair is common along the binding spine and corners of older comics. Watch for color touchup, invisible tape inside the cover, and piece replacement.
Stress Lines are small lines along the binding of a comic.
Right Hand Front Cover
Look for color flakes, chips, tiny creases, fraying.
Bottom Left Corner
Watch for edge wear, fraying, creases and rounding.
Lower Edge Front Cover
Bottom Right Corner
Watch for edge wear, fraying, creases and rounding.
THOR! ANT MAN! HULK! IRON MAN!
THE AVENGERS
EARTH'S MIGHTIEST SUPER-HEROES!
LOKI! PREPARE FOR BATTLE!
THE AVENGERS... BAH! I'LL DESTROY YOU ALL!

HOW TO ORDER

Comics Source is not a clearinghouse or middleman, you buy directly from each advertiser. A "Seller ID" code at the end of each listing tells you who the advertiser is — find the address and telephone number by looking up the code in the Marketplace Advertiser Directory in the back of this issue.

To simplify the job of placing your order, we recommend these steps:

1 Make a list of all items you want to buy, arrange it by "Seller ID," then title, issue number, price, etc.

2 Use the Marketplace Advertisers Directory, in the back of this issue, to locate the address and telephone number of each seller on your list.

3 If you like, call the seller to verify that the items are still available.

4 If you place a hold on any comics, be sure to promptly send payment directly to the seller. If you don't send payment within 7 days, you may lose the item.

5 Read the Mail-Order Terms, don't forget to add the necessary shipping charge.

6 Send payment and a copy of your order to the seller with your name, address, and telephone number written clearly. Keep a copy for your records. Be sure to send your payment directly to the seller, not to Comics Source.

QUESTIONS?

(615) 265-5515

Remember, you contact each advertiser directly — Comics Source is not a clearinghouse. If you need help contacting an advertiser or placing your order, feel free to call.

MAIL-ORDER TERMS

These terms apply to all advertisers unless otherwise indicated. Contact each advertiser for additional terms such as discounts and credit card availability. When phoning an order, ask if there are any other non-standard terms.

PAYMENT with order unless prior arrangements are made. Personal checks must clear.

SHIPPING CHARGE USPS or UPS ground is normally $5 within continental U.S. for most orders, extra charge for Canada & Overseas or overweight. Fed EX, Blue Label, etc. is an extra charge.

PLACING YOUR ORDER By mail or phone. All advertisers must ship orders within 2 working days after receiving good funds. Phone orders should either be paid by credit card or placed on hold for 7 days. If not paid within 7 days items are placed back in stock. Mail orders should list alternate choices when possible, but alternates are used only in the event your first choice is sold.

PHOTOS Most sellers can provide a photo or Xerox copy but usually request a $1 fee to cover the time and expense.

GRADING Standard grading terms apply. Consult "Making The Grade" for more details about the different grades/conditions of comics.

DISCOUNTS Most sellers offer a 10% courtesy discount to other dealers. This is optional. Most ask to see a letterhead, copy of business license or resale # to qualify. Inquire.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED! Return any item within 6 days for a prompt refund.

COMPLAINTS?

If you have an unresolved problem with an advertiser, contact the publishers of this magazine. Any advertiser with three unresolved complaints will not be permitted to continue advertising.

COMICS SOURCE MARKETPLACE

OUR FORMAT & HOW IT WORKS

How do you contact the advertisers? Simple, all you do is look up the ID code at the end of each listing in the MARKETPLACE ADVERTISER DIRECTORY (in the back of this issue). There you will find the name, address, and (usually) the telephone number. Call 'em up and order!

The COMICS SOURCE Indexed Marketplace is a unique method of arranging ads. Each listing is like a classified ad, with a code at the end that indicates who the buyer or seller is.

Remember, COMICS SOURCE is not a clearinghouse or middleman, you deal directly with each advertiser.

OUR FORMAT & HOW IT WORKS

How do you contact the advertisers? Simple, all you do is look up the ID code at the end of each listing in the MARKETPLACE ADVERTISER DIRECTORY (in the back of this issue). There you will find the name, address, and (usually) the telephone number. Call 'em up and order!

The COMICS SOURCE Indexed Marketplace is a unique method of arranging ads. Each listing is like a classified ad, with a code at the end that indicates who the buyer or seller is.

Remember, COMICS SOURCE is not a clearinghouse or middleman, you deal directly with each advertiser.

MAIL-ORDER SELLING TIPS

1 Ship orders within two days after the check clears.

2 Get a supply of padded mailers, boxes, mailing labels, and shipping tape. These are available at your local office supply store. Package with extreme care to avoid any damage in shipment. Inform the buyer when you will ship the order, and then follow up on it.

3 Always insure your package. For U.S. Postal Service packages, use a return receipt so that someone must sign for it. Whenever possible, use UPS or Federal Express becuase they automatically require a signature.

4 Pack books carefully in a sturdy box or mailer. Don't cram books into a package.

5 Include your name and address on both the outside and inside of your package.

6 Don't spend the money until the buyer's return privilege expires.

7 If an item is already sold, send a refund check, not a credit form.

8 Treat your buyers the way you'd like to be treated and they will become good customers—buying again and again.

9 As a Comics Source advertiser, you must accept returns for any reason if the comic(s) is sent back in the same condition received and postmarked within six days of receipt. Send refunds promptly. If comics you sent were damaged by the carrier, refund the buyer's money immediately and file your insurance claim.

Mail-Order sales have become highly regulated by the USPS, observing these rules will avoid problems.
